ABSTRACT

A guide is presented for students on the policies and practices of public and private New York colleges and universities in regard to granting credit, course waiver, or advanced standing to those who pass the College Proficiency Examinations (CPEs) and the Regents External Degree Examinations (REDEs). A chart indicates, for each institution and subject field, the tests it accepts, the grade or score required, and the number of credits awarded. A separate section provides information on any conditions pertaining to the granting of credits for CPEs and REDEs, as well as the office on each campus to contact when requesting credit. Specifically, the following identifying information is included for the alphabetically-listed institutions: mailing address, telephone number, whether it is a two-year or four-year college and the level of degrees offered, and the contact person or office. For each test, the grading system used, the number of recommended credits, and the type of test items are also specified. Questions and answers about the CPEP and REX examinations are included. It is noted that of the state's 248 degree-granting institutions, 200 indicated that they will accept one or more of the CPEs or REDEs. Among the other 48 institutions are seminaries, graduate facilities, and professional schools. (SW)

FOREWORD

The College Proficiency Examination Program (CPEP) was created by the New York State Board of Regents in 1963. The purpose of CPEP has been and is to provide an opportunity for adults to gain credit for college-level knowledge gained outside the classroom.

In 1970, the Board of Regents expanded the credit by examination concept of CPEP into the Regents External Degree Program (REX), providing an alternate route to a college degree as well as the opportunity to earn credit by examination. The REX Program offers eight fully accredited degrees; four at the associate level and four at the baccalaureate level. These degrees are in the arts and sciences, business, and nursing. As part of the REX Program, several competency-based proficiency examinations were developed in business and nursing. Since 1976, most CPEP and REX tests have been made available nationwide, and throughout the world to military personnel, through an arrangement with the American College Testing Program.

The credit recommendations established for the CPEP and REX tests provide colleges and universities with reliable standards on which to base credit awards. Taking these tests has stimulated many adults to enroll in degree programs because they can receive academic recognition for the learning they have demonstrated.

The preparation of this booklet is part of our efforts to improve services to students, higher education institutions and the public. The booklet provides specific information on the policies and practices of colleges and universities in the State, both public and independent, in regard to accepting for credit the CPEP and REX proficiency tests. We hope this publication will guide students seeking college credit for the examinations they have completed. We also hope this publication, will assist the faculties and staffs of the State's colleges in understanding better the CPEP and REX programs.

PURPOSE OF THIS PUBLICATION

The need for this publication is demonstrated by the many inquiries we receive from both students and college faculty and administrators asking about our programs of credit by examination. Students—who are either potential test-takers or those who have already taken one or more of our tests—want to know at which colleges in the State they may earn credit for College Proficiency Examinations (CPEs) and Regents External Degree Examinations (REDEs). Faculty members want to know about our tests and which colleges in the State grant credit for those tests. The purpose of this publication is to make available information on these credit-granting policies and practices.

Since 1963, over 112,000 credits have been awarded by the State's colleges for CPEs. Since the founding of REX in 1970, over 136,000 credits have been awarded by the State's colleges (including REX) for REDEs. Also, out-of-state colleges have awarded over 7,600 credits for CPEs and over 1,000 credits for REDEs. The total of college credits awarded to date is over 256,600. Thus, it is clear that both CPEs and REDEs are well respected and widely accepted by the academic community.

The institutions listed in this booklet grant credit for successful completion of one or more of our CPEs and REDEs. These institutions are encouraging adults to continue their education by recognizing learning that takes place outside the traditional classroom and that, properly documented, can be recorded on a transcript and counted toward fulfillment of degree requirements.

The information contained in this booklet was gathered in 1981 to document the policies and practices of the State's colleges with regard to granting credit, course waiver, or advanced standing to those who pass CPEs and REDEs. This information will be updated periodically.

HOW TO USE THE INFORMATION IN THIS PUBLICATION

This booklet has been prepared to assist test-takers and colleges in effectively using credit recommendations established for CPEs and REDEs. It contains information about the credit-granting policies of higher education institutions in New York State, as well as about the office on each campus to contact when requesting credit, or learning if there are any conditions pertaining to the granting of credits for CPEs and REDEs.

The chart beginning on page 4 shows which colleges accept which tests, the grade or score required and the number of credits awarded.

Information for Students

Students can use the information in this booklet to help them gain college credit for College Proficiency Examination Program tests and Regents External Degree Program tests. The questions and answers below are intended to help in that process.

Q. How do I choose a college or university?

- A. If you are living in an area where there are several colleges, review their catalogs and talk with their admissions counselors about their programs and policies with regard to accepting credit by examination. These counselors can help you to establish educational goals and to choose the best program to meet your goals.

Q. Is college credit automatically earned when someone successfully completes a CPE or REDE?

- A. Successful completion of a proficiency examination results in actual college credit only when a postsecondary degree-granting institution grants credit for the test and puts it on a transcript.

Q. How can I find out if my CPE or REDE is transferable to my collegiate program of study?

- A. Look up the college description (listed alphabetically) in this booklet to determine the general policy of the college in regard to awarding credit for examination. If the college does have such a policy, then consult the Table beginning on page 40 which lists the names of the tests accepted, the grade or score required, and the number of credits awarded. You should also note any particular conditions attending the award of credit from the institution in which you are interested. Then contact the person or office listed under the college entry to get further details. Always check with the college from which you will seek credit before taking an examination.

Q. How many credits can I earn for the CPEs and/or REDEs I complete?

- A. The number of credits recommended for all CPEs and REDEs is listed on pages 40-41 in this booklet and in the College Proficiency Examinations/Regents External Degrees brochure. However, colleges may follow these recommendations, or may award a greater or lesser amount of credit.

Q. Do most colleges grant credit for CPEs and REDEs?

- A. The 1981 survey information reported in this publication indicates that about 80 percent of the degree-granting postsecondary institutions in New York State grant credit for one or more of our CPEs and REDEs. For the remaining 20 percent, CPEs and REDEs may not be appropriate to their specialized curricula.

Q. If I cannot earn credit for them, are there other ways the tests I've taken can help me?

- A. It is possible that you may earn advanced standing in a program of study or have a prerequisite course waived. These types of advantages can save you money and time even though you may not be awarded actual credit. This, however, is entirely up to the college you are attending or plan to attend. The examinations may also be used to meet certain New York State teacher certification requirements or for other job-related purposes.

Q. How are student records of the test scores reported to colleges?

A. The College Proficiency Examination Program and the Regents External Degree Program will provide colleges with an official transcript upon your written request. The transcript will enable a college official to verify that you successfully completed the test and the date of completion.

Q. What if a college wants more information about the tests I took or the type of score I received?

A. Refer the college official to the address below for additional information:

COLLEGE ENTRIES

The descriptions in this booklet provide information about those colleges and universities in New York State which grant credit, course waiver, or advanced standing for College Proficiency and Regents External Degree Examinations.

Pages 18-37 of this booklet list those institutions that currently grant credit for successful completion of one or more CPEP or REX examinations, the amount of credit that may be awarded, and the scores an examinee must achieve in order to receive such credit.

The entries are listed in alphabetical order. All units of the City and State Universities are listed alphabetically under each of those major headings.

Of the State's 248 degree-granting higher institutions, 200 indicated that they will accept one or more of the College Proficiency or Regents External Degree Examinations. Among the other 48 institutions are seminaries, graduate facilities and professional schools. For many of these colleges CPEs or REDEs may not be appropriate to their specialized curricula.

We strongly recommend to all potential test-takers that they check ahead of time with the college at which they plan to enroll or where they are enrolled to determine that institution's policy with regard to awarding credit for College Proficiency Examinations (CPEs) and Regents External Degree Examinations (REDEs). We make this recommendation because many of the colleges, universities and schools listed below have established conditions for the acceptance of CPEs and REDEs toward the granting of credit, waiving of courses, or granting of advanced standing. Decisions about whether or not to grant a student's request are frequently left to academic departments. Other conditions may include: limiting the amount of transfer credit an institution will accept, setting particular requirements of a degree program, requiring that a similar course be offered at the college where credit is being sought, or requiring different grades or scores from those recommended by the New York Regents. In addition, institutions may set other or additional conditions.

This booklet does not contain information about specific curriculums, degrees, enrollment procedures, or residency requirements. You should contact directly the institution(s) in which you are interested to obtain such information as you make plans to take CPEP or REX examinations and continue your education.

HOW TO READ A COLLEGE ENTRY

Descriptions of each institution which awards credit for CPEs and REDEs appear in the next several pages. The description for each institution includes the following information:

1. College Name
2. Mailing Address
3. Telephone Number
4. Institutional Level: Indication of whether it is a two-year or four-year institution and the level of degrees offered.
5. Policy: The college's policy on accepting CPEs and REDEs. College policies are reported as being institution-wide, departmental, or handled individually on a case-by-case basis. [If a college reported that a policy is currently being considered, it is so indicated; generally, these colleges have already granted credit to individual students. If a college reported, because of its specialized nature, it can not use the credit recommendations, or if no information was available for a college, then that college was not included in this publication.]
6. Contact Person: The individual or office that should be contacted for information about the college's use of credit recommendations for CPEs and REDEs.

STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK (SUNY)

On July 23, 1976, the State University of New York adopted a university-wide policy on the award of academic credit by evaluation. The College Proficiency Examinations of the New York State Education Department were among those proficiency examinations found to be acceptable toward fulfillment of degree requirements at any University campus. However, individual campuses may determine the circumstances surrounding the award of such credit.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT CPEP AND REX EXAMINATIONS

Who may take CPEP and REX examinations?

Anyone may register to take a CPEP or REX examination, regardless of that person's age or educational background. To help you prepare, we have developed a study guide for each examination. The study guide includes an introduction to the test, a statement of objectives, a description of the examination's content, a bibliography of recommended readings, and, in most cases, sample questions.

Where can I find the study materials listed in the bibliography of the study guide?

Places you may want to try to find study materials include local public and college libraries, bookstores and publishing companies.

How should I prepare for taking a CPEP or REX test?

In addition to the study guide for each test, we have available two publications to assist test-takers in preparing themselves. The two publications are: "How To Study Independently" and "Study Suggestions For College Proficiency and Regents External Degree Examinations." These publications are available free of charge.

How do I register for taking a CPEP or REX test?

Obtain an Examination Application from the Albany office of CPEP/REX. Follow carefully the instructions on the form and be sure to put the completed form and your check in the mail to us by the deadline date (usually about 5 weeks before the test).

How much does it cost to take a CPEP or REX test?

The cost per test varies. CPEs range between $25 and $35; REX tests range between $50 and $225. Contact the Albany Office for further up-to-date information on test fees.

Where are the tests given?

CPEP and REX tests are available at a dozen different locations throughout the State. These locations are indicated on the Examination Application.

When are the tests given?

Most tests are offered six times a year in February, March, May, June, October and November. For specific test dates, consult the current edition of the Examination Application.

What kinds of questions will I find on CPEP and REX tests?

There are two kinds of questions asked on CPEP and REX tests: multiple-choice (objective) questions, and essay or problem-solving questions. Some tests are entirely multiple-choice; others are entirely essay or problem-solving; and still others include both multiple choice and essay questions. The list on pages 40-41 indicates the types of items included on each test.

How are CPEP and REX tests scored and reported?

Multiple choice (objective) tests are machine-scored by our computers. The turnaround time for test score reporting is usually about 60 days. Examinations which contain essay questions are graded by the appropriate faculty committee, from The University of the State of New York, which developed the tests. The turnaround time on score reports for these tests is about 90 days.

Once scored, you are sent a score report. If you so desire, we shall send a transcript of your grade to whomever you want. However, the request must be in writing. College credits appear as semester hours.

Before awarding you credit, course waiver, or advanced standing, a faculty member at your college may want to review your essay answers. Again, the request to see your answers must be approved by you in writing and a written request must come from the faculty member.

Three grading systems are used on our tests: pass/fail, letter grades or standard scores. Pass/fail grades are used when the purpose of the test is to determine basic competence in a comprehensive subject area; no attempt is made to differentiate among levels of competence. Letter grades are used to differentiate among levels of successful performance and to report performance on some examinations that contain both essay questions and multiple-choice questions. Standard scores are used to differentiate among many levels of performance and to report performance on examinations which contain only multiple-choice questions. The list on pages 40-41 indicates the grading system used on each test.

If I do not pass a CPEP or REX test, may I retake it?

Yes. The only proviso is that you must wait a minimum of 60 days before you retake it.

Are CPEP and REX tests available outside of New York State?

Yes. Through an arrangement with the American College Testing (ACT) Program in Iowa City, Iowa, most CPEs and REX tests are available nationwide, and overseas to military personnel, as ACT Proficiency Examination Program Tests, (or ACT PEP tests).

Are there special procedures for military personnel who wish to take the examinations?

If they are stationed in New York State, they have two options: they may pay for the tests and take them through our regular testing procedures, or they may take most of them as ACT PEP tests through the DANTES Test Control Officer network.

If they are stationed in another State or overseas, they must work through the DANTES Test Control Officer network. Test Control Officers at military bases should have complete information about administering the examinations. Score reports are sent to the examinee in care of the Test Control Officer.

Are the ACT PEP examinations available to nonmilitary persons overseas?

Yes. In some cases, overseas DANTES test centers can offer the tests to U. S. citizens. In other cases, special arrangements can be made by writing to:

ACT PEP Coordinator

Iowa City, Iowa 52243

What is the Regents External Degree Program?

It is an innovative degree-granting program, fully accredited by the Middle States Association and other accrediting bodies. It is based on independent study and designed primarily for mature, motivated adults. There are no age, residency or other prerequisites for enrolling. The program offers eight degrees: four associate and four baccalaureate degrees in the liberal arts and sciences, business and nursing. Degree requirements can be met in a variety of ways including course work at regionally accredited colleges; proficiency examinations; military service schools; formally evaluated courses sponsored by certain businesses, industries and other organizations; and, special assessment of college-level knowledge gained from on-the-job training, formal coursework, or independent study.
